Hi Mike, sorry for the slow follow-up. I was on vacation last week. I think we met in person during the Romney campaign, where I served as domestic policy director, and of course I have heard a lot about you from Rebecca Rosen, who handled energy and environment policy for our policy shop back then.

Allen, this is the draft press release version that Mary Beckman, our communications lead at PNNL.

I would be very interested in your reaction, and any suggestions you would have to improve this document. I have concerns regarding a number of statements starting with the opening paragraph, and particularly the last sentence, which I don't think does justice to our paper.

Okay, how's this? It's WAY easier to read in "Track changes No Markup" mode, but I left all the trackmarks in because that's how you keep the comments on. I cleaned up a few deleted paragraphs that didn't make it past the first cut.

I trimmed the numbers in the middle section.

Please read it for accuracy. Let me know if I have made anything up, if I've stressed something I shouldn't, or didn't stress something I should. Remember that the audience is lay public, not people like you guys who think about this all day long. At the same time, it needs to be useful to reporters who cover climate change, so that's why I threw in some numbers. You can make comments or suggest edits with track changes or make a list or call me -- whatever you find easiest. I will address them and return the copy to you.

Please don't share this with anyone else yet. I think we in media relations are waiting to hear back from DOE about whether they support or do not support us doing a release on this paper. (Or whether they're okay with neither supporting nor not supporting it and just letting it be.)

Hi everyone,

Thank you all for your great work in preparing for the G-20 Sherpa meeting last week. With all of the talking points, background, and concept papers, we helped prepare Caroline for a strong energy and climate intervention. I have pasted the notes below from this session thanks to David and Matt, who accompanied Caroline. I have also attached the final briefing note for your records.

The Turks have also shared our two new concept papers, attached, with the G-20 members. We will reach out with next steps soon on advancing our ideas on energy access principles and methane reductions from the oil and gas sector. We will also reconvene in person before the next ESWG meeting in May, which precedes the next Sherpa meeting in June.

Please let me know if you have any questions and thank you again for all of your work supporting this.

Have a great weekend! – Kate

Subject: U.S.-China Joint Statement

Gina: As mentioned, here is the Joint Statement on climate change that we will be releasing this Friday. Our topline point coming out of the meeting will be that last year was about setting targets, and this year is about showing the world how committed both countries are to implementation. Our conservative estimate, approved by both China and your team, is that actions finalized or initiated by both countries since last year's announcement will avoid more than 20 billion tons of carbon pollution over time.

We have worked with your team to develop cleared language that highlights actions taken by EPA over the past ten months and offers appropriate indications of where you are headed. The key EPA elements are CPP, HDVs and HFCs. On the Chinese side, they are unveiling new specifics that I think will get notice, specifically:

- ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ Committing to launch in 2017 a national emission trading system (ETS) covering power generation, steel, cement, and other sectors.

- Implementing a “green dispatch” system to favor low-carbon sources in the electric grid.
- Finalizing next-stage fuel efficiency standards for heavy-duty vehicles in 2016 and implementing them in 2019.
- Increasing the share of green buildings to 50% in newly built buildings in cities and towns by 2020 and the share of public transport in motorized travel reaching 30% in big-and-medium-sized cities by 2020.
- Actions on HFCs continue to be supported and accelerated, including effectively controlling HFC-23 emissions by 2020.

Subject: For review by 3pm tmrw: China prep docs

Hello all,

I've attached two documents for the China transparency trip for your review. The first is the latest list of draft issues for discussion, incorporating the various edits I've received to date. Let me know ASAP if you have any additional edits before I send to Gao.

The second document is an annotated agenda responding to the draft issues for discussion. Please send any edits by 3pm tomorrow (Friday). Note that some parts of it are pretty rough.

Thanks,

Andrew

Looks good. One suggested addition and deletion (unless you think China strongly opposes projections...I think we can gather enough support from friendlies)

Hello – I've attached a list of proposed issues to discuss with China at next week's bilateral meeting. These issues would help guide the discussion, in light of the high-level agenda I sent last week. My main goal with these questions would be to better understand China's underlying interests on the MPGs. And to be clear, asking a question does not mean we agree or disagree with it.

I'd like to share this list of proposed issues with Gao by COB tomorrow (Thursday), so can you please send any comments by then? Sorry for the tight turnaround. And please feel free to cut questions as it's currently too long.

After we draft the list of issues, we can then start to fill in objectives/talking points below each item.

Finally, China's transparency submission just came in. It's attached here. Overall, it's quite See below email from Gao. China-U.S. bilateral workshop will be 1.5 days (11th and morning of 12th). Bummer that they cut it down but at least it's happening.

I've updated the agenda to fit the 1.5 day time slot and incorporated Gao's suggestions (see attached). Can you please let me know if you have any edits?

I'll also develop a list of points for discussion and send around for your review on Tuesday.

Thanks,

Andrew

Subject: Re:Checking in on our bilateral meeting

Several updates:

I heard the meeting will take place in the meeting room 9 in NDRC, and will last for 1.5 days, include the whole day of 11th and morning of 12th.

About the agenda, my feeling is that, we can remove the session on updating recent workshops, and we can provide relevant information within each other session.

My suggestion is to keep the agenda simple, only cover the session title and time and facilitator (just say CN or US lead), and provide a list of points for discussion in another paper. This is to avoid scaring NDRC people.

Several points I wish to discuss with your side:

- should the report(s) submitted as a comprehensive one, or could be submitted separately for different section? This will have implication to submitting frequency.
- shall we develop the tables or we can leave them to SBSTA after 2018?
- how can we approach to the 2018 decision, especially when and who should make the negotiation text?
- can we create new forms for review and FMCP? if so when shall we provide such ideas to the negotiation process?
- for other technical issues in each section, I think you have already got ideas, and I wish to see your list, Haha~~ btw, for the workshop, I'm thinking if we can make some changes, other than go through submissions and positions section by section, may be we should formulate guiding questions as those ones I got above, for Parties to discuss. Not to make the workshop as the extension of negotiation. What do you think?

Best,

GAO

Hi Gao - A few thoughts and questions on our upcoming bilateral meeting.

Do you have any updates on the approval process? One of my colleagues raised it in a meeting last week with NDRC and said it was well received. And have we finalized the dates and location of the meeting?

Also, I've been thinking a bit more about the agenda. I'm now thinking that rather than using the very general questions contained in the agenda I sent you, we should identify a list of key topics under each item that we'd like to discuss. For example, national GHG inventory reports could include items like: (1) IPCC guidance/guidelines used in the MPGs; (2) how to operationalize flexibility for those developing countries that need it in the light of their capacities in the MPGs; (3) MPGs' relationship with existing UNFCCC GHG inventory reporting and review processes; etc. Given that the U.S. will not be drafting a submission, this seems like the next best way to have a focused conversation. If this sounds ok to you, I can take a first stab at listing key issues, and then send to you for your edits.

Tx!

Andrew

Hi Elan

Thanks for sharing this and for keeping the discussion rolling. We're still working through our approach to accounting internally, but am happy to give you a sense of where I think we are heading, and also wanted to come back to you with a few questions. Will keep my comments to accounting, rather than the broader mitigation section and in an ode to your preferred speaking style, I've numbered the list:

1. Your overall approach aligns with our thinking, ie articulating key principles as prose in the agreement text (and specifically in Section D), with further content in the decision.
2. On the chapeau to 4, we are playing with language that is a little stronger than "recognising the importance" and would read something like "Parties shall apply accounting approaches that promote environmental integrity, transparency, accuracy, completeness, comparability and consistency of mitigation efforts and avoid double counting of efforts while accommodating

Dear colleagues,
You are invited to participate in a White House Roundtable Discussion on The Role of U.S. Lands in Deep Decarbonization taking place on August 3, 2016, in 722 Jackson Place.

Earlier this year, President Obama announced the intention to release a mid-century, long-term low greenhouse gas emission strategy pursuant to the 2015 Paris Agreement. Part of the Administration's work to develop the mid-century strategy includes discussions of key topics with the foremost experts in the field. This roundtable will be focused on the role of U.S. lands, including forests, grasslands, cropland, and sustainable cities, as part of a deep decarbonization strategy.

Event Details:

What: Roundtable Discussion on The Role of U.S. Lands in Deep Decarbonization

When: 3:30 - 5:30 (ET), Wednesday, August 3, 2016

Where: 722 Jackson Place. NW - 1st Floor Conference Room - Washington D.C.

Note: This event is "off-the-record" and not for press purposes. We will not be seeking consensus advice or recommendations from the group.

Please reply to this email to RSVP by 12:00pm (ET), Tuesday, August 2. For those who are unable to attend in person, we will provide a call in number. If you have questions, please contact Dan Esposito at:
